 set of equations. These equations are then solved by the method of characteristics. The results of the calculations are then presented. It is shown that the problem is solved for all values of the parameters. The author then discusses the physical significance of the results. It is shown that the results are in good agreement with the experimental data. The author then concludes the paper by stating that the problem has been solved.

2. The second part of the paper is devoted to a detailed analysis of the problem. It is shown that the problem can be reduced to a set of equations. These equations are then solved by the method of characteristics. The results of the calculations are then presented. It is shown that the problem is solved for all values of the parameters. The author then discusses the physical significance of the results. It is shown
 has been solved.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the theoretical aspects of the problem. It is shown that the problem is equivalent to a problem in the theory of differential equations. The main result of this part is the theorem that the problem has a unique solution if the initial conditions are satisfied. The proof of this theorem is given in the next part of the paper.

2. In the second part of the paper, the problem is solved for a particular case. It is shown that the solution can be expressed in terms of elementary functions. The main result of this part is the theorem that the solution is unique. The proof of this theorem is given in the next part of the paper.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written in a dark ink on aged, slightly discolored paper. It consists of several lines of text, with some words appearing to be in a different script or dialect than others, possibly indicating a mix of languages or a specific regional dialect. The handwriting is fluid and characteristic of the period.
